> Author's Note: This is your basic disclaimer. I don't own Digimon.

None of the characters in this story are really mine. I usually make my fics WAAAAAAYYYY long so this time I'll keep it short and sweet.

Got it? "MageKari Tai woke up one morning to find his room was a complete mess. "You should help me clean our room Tai," his head filled with his sister's voice from yesterday. "Oh.. well I'll clean it tomorrow. Today is my arcade day!" was his way to reply.

He went down to breakfast. His mother had made pancakes as usual.

"Tai. You need to clean that room. You can't go anywhere until you clean it!" she told him. "But Mom! I was going to the arcade today!" he wailed back. "Told ya you needed to clean it yesterday, Tai." His sister told him; "I can still go out cause my area is clean."

"Man..." he grumbled back.

Tai was in his room cleaning and he found a piece of pizza from two years back. "Eww... Disgusting!" he said as he threw it in the garbage. "Need help, Tai?" his sister, asked. "Yeah." He said smiling. And with that they began to clean the room.

A few hours later the room was clean and Kari was looking at it from the balcony. It looked nice. She took a step back and slipped. One of the bars had broken so; she could fall through them. She fell and barely grabbed the edge. "Tai! Help me!" she shouted. Tai was instantly holding her hand and pulling her up. He hugged her and said, "Try to be a little more careful next time."

Later that evening, his mom saw his room. "Wow, Tai. You did a good job," she said commenting the room. "Yeah, well I couldn't have done it without Kari," he said giving her fair credit. So they were both treated with extra desert. "You two are unbelievable," his mom said thoughtfully.

Later that night Kari and Tai were looking at the stars. "There's Orion!" Kari pointed out to Tai. "Yeah, well there is the Little Dipper!" he said in a funny voice making her laugh. "Hahaha.... Stop Tai! You're too... funny!" she said gasping for breath. He then started making funny faces to make her laugh.

About thirty minutes later Kari was cuddled beside Tai, asleep. He was still staring at the stars thinking about his amazing sister. "I don't know what I'd do without her," he said looking down at her thoughtfully. He carried her inside and put her to bed and went to bed himself.

The next day they were awake and were on their way to the arcade. They ran into Matt on the way. "Hey, Matt! What's new with you?" Tai said cheerfully. "Nothin much. I was on my way to dad's work. I'll see ya," he said walking away. "Bye!" Tai and Kari said together. Then they went to the arcade.

Tai and Kari had a great time at the arcade. They went home. On the way Tai slipped and hurt his knee bad. Kari took to bandaging it up and helping him walk. "You'll be ok, Tai," she said letting him lean on her. "Thanks, sis," he said wincing with pain. They got home and his mom did a better job at bandaging it.

They were eating dinner and chatting with their mom and dad. Tai started to make funny faces at Kari to make her laugh again. Kari muffled Tai's hair to make him laugh at how funny he looked too. Then she took an apple and shoved one bite into his mouth. "An apple a day keeps the doctor away!" she said laughing. He took one and shoved a bite into her mouth. They were both laughing. Their parents looked at each other thoughtfully.

Later that night when they were all ready for bed, Tai threw a pillow at Kari and she threw one back. They had a big pillow fight. When they were through they both looked like angels. Tai blew his hair out of his face. "Well there goes our clean room!" he said and sighed. "Don't worry. We'll tackle it tomorrow, together," she replied.

End: So what do ya think? Is it good? It's the shortest one yet. It's as good as I could make it. Well see ya.
